Synopsis of event

With offshore wind deployment accelerating globally and floating wind technology rapidly emerging, cost competitiveness has become paramount for sustaining industry growth at scale. Confronted by escalating material costs, supply chain constraints, and increasing project complexity, offshore wind stakeholders must double down on their strategies to drive down the levelised cost of energy (LCOE). This session brings together key offshore wind stakeholders to explore where the next frontier of cost reductions will come from. It will focus on practical pathways to scale deployment and enhance the commercial viability of offshore wind projects, including through encouraging East-West collaborations, supply chain optimisation and innovations in digital and O&M technologies.
