To achieve this huge ambition, European Member States need to accelerate several measures to reduce the time to operation for onshore energy projects. Some new renewable energy zones and corridors, shared infrastructure and expedited permitting of new projects are impacted on a regional scale with significant ongoing challenges and collaborations.

We aim to address these key challenges for Henrik, the persona of a Permitting Agent.

Henrik has been a permit manager in a municipality for many years. One of his main responsibilities is to coordinate the permitting process for wind energy projects in his area. He is often hard to know what the status of a permit application is, as he receives notifications from the different stakeholders involved in the process.

We aim to simplify Collaboration.

- We are simplifying Collaboration.
  - Permissions agents often have multiple application processes to track. If they do not keep track of the status of each application, it can be complex to get a clear overview of all the permits that are in progress.
  - We are simplifying Collaboration.
  - EasyPermits automatically tracks the status of all permit applications, giving permission agents a clear overview of the permits and their status.

We are simplifying Information Management.

- A permit application can be a couple of hundred pages long, and the information can be scattered in different formats and channels. Keeping an overview of all the information can often be difficult.
- We are simplifying Information Management.
- EasyPermits creates a central repository for all permit applications, allowing permission agents to easily access and interact with the information.

We are simplifying Process Transparency.

- Transparency is a critical aspect of the permitting process, as stakeholders need to know where their projects are in the process.
- We are simplifying Process Transparency.
- EasyPermits provides a dashboard that allows permission agents to easily track the status of all permit applications.
